Can you get to it? Can you get away from it? Those are the two questions that settle many a real estate deal. A place that you cannot easily reach or leave at any time, winter or summer, is handicapped both for business and living conditions. No matter how excellent a plant you have, if it is located in an isolated place, you are facing one of the most severe setbacks. Nearness to market, good highways and good railroad facilities are necessary in present day successful manufacturing. Lacking these you are not on the same footing with other plants to meet keen competition, and the very keenest competition is what the future holds for all.

THE ASHLAND COTTON COMPANY is very advantageously situated in Jewett City, Conn. Nearly midway between New York City and Boston, the largest textile buying centres in the United States. Next dloor neighbor to Providence where the bulk of the New England raw cotton business is transacted. The N. Y., N. H. & H. Railroad offers excellent shipping facilities, as well as a daily line of motor trucks operating throughout the year. Raw stocks can be easily secured and delivered to the mill and likewise finished material can be shipped promptly and easily.

Grey goods must pass through the bleaching and finishing processes before offered to the consumer. The Ashland Cotton Company is located right in the section of New England where all the large finishing plants are situated. This means short hauls and small freight rates to be added to the cost of the finished goods. Some plants when built are so located as to secure favorable shipping facilities, but these mills are mainly dependent on purchased electrical or steam generated power which cannot compete with cheap water power.

The Ashland Cotton Company has the advantages of location and cheap water power. It is well to bear this in consider the safety of your Ashland preferred stock.

It has all along, of course, been agreeably evident to us that the new Type 61 Cadillac, in a number of important respects, is an even better Cadillac than we have ever produced before.

But it is pleasant, nevertheless, to have our own judgment of the new Cadillac so widely and wonderfully confirmed by owners, who have observed the car's quality in actual road-performance.

They inform us delightedly that - Type 61 Cadillac.

it reveals a wholly new degree of road-steadiness and ridingsmoothness. They are scarcely less enthusiastic over its superb power and its swift and easy acceleration.

Especially if one is familiar with the past splendid performance of the Cadillac, it is difficult to realize that such improvements can exist, but they do exist, to the delight of owners, in the new
